

LIVE AND LET LIVE

During a recent holiday on Nevis in the West Indies, one of our readers needed a driving permit; with it he received the following instruction sheet, warning him of the consequences of driving too fast.

It was wise advice because the Nevisians drive on the left, having been a British colony and drive left-hand drive cars, which meant keeping well over to the left and in the ditch when meeting anyone. The religious tone of their caution must be influenced by there being ten different denominations for a population of just over 9,000. Sunday services last for between two and three hours.
