

The Wychwood

Something Different, Something New

As I sit by the window, the evening outside is completely dark. It seems the nights are drawing in and the trees are turning a glorious orange, and we think back to the promise of a barbecue summer and the rain, and hope it's time for something a bit different. Perhaps an Indian summer is in order.

'Something different' seems to be the theme running through this edition, be it Jo Schofield's daring parachute jump on page 9 or Amanda Henriques turning her hand to TV stardom on page 19.

'Something new' for the Wychwoods is Diwali, the Hindu Festival of Lights, fully explained on page 23. And how about trying something new yourself, take up photography and follow in David Trollope's footsteps on page 21.

The Wychwood itself has followed suit with a dusting of fresh new material: Open House is our newest feature on pages 36 and 37, along with a tasty new recipe on page 47. I hope you'll like our offerings, and in case you're wondering, I've thoroughly enjoyed my stint as Guest Editor, more about this on page 5, but don't worry, Christine will be back soon!
